

ABSTRACT

5 A method for training a receiving modem connected through a telephone network to correct for differences between a transmitted and a received symbol occasioned by network impairments including robbed bit signaling which preempts a least significant bit of a customer's data depending on the frame assigned by the network for such connection.

CONFIDENTIAL